1. Have you previously rushed Alpha Kappa Psi? (Yes/No)

No

2. What other organizations/extracurriculars are you a part of?

Some of the organizations and extracurriculars I take part on campus are: Dunkin' Donuts, the Glavin Chapel Math Academy Team, and TSA (Taiwan Student Association). I have been working under Dunkin' Donuts for over a year as an on campus job. For the Glavin Chapel Math Academy Team, I pay frequent visits to local elementary schools and tutor their students math. As for the Taiwan Student Association, I have fulfilled the position of VP of Communications. My job is to communicate with the TSA organizations at other schools in order to form connections and hold events together to educate others on Taiwan's culture.

3. How will you contribute to the fraternity? (max 300 words)

I will contribute both my customer service and problem solving skills learned from working at Dunkin' Donuts. At Dunkin' Donuts, I learned to serve thousands of customers with different needs and characteristics. Even though some requests are not reasonable, we still have to try our best to fulfill them to satisfy our customer. For example, the customer wants us to redo the order because she did not pick up her food right after it was made. The customer is the largest factor for businesses. Hence, I have learned to treat race, gender and natural difference equally and to solve emergencies whenever something goes wrong. Also, I have learned the hardship of an entrepreneur through the experience of my parents. With their own travel company, they have been through a lot to build a large network in the Taiwan travel industry. I can share their entrepreneurial experience and story to teach our brothers the path to become a successful entrepreneur in the real world. Additionally, I can then use my parents large network of connections to help any brothers who are interested in doing business with traveling or to lower travel prices for their company. Other than these, my parents' main target is the expanding the growing Chinese market. I can then use their knowledge to teach brothers the approach for going into the Chinese market. I can also use my personal knowledge to teach the brothers my Taiwanese/Chinese culture to prevent culture shock. It is also useful to learn Chinese and Taiwanese to do business in the future.

4. How do you measure success? (max 300 words)

Success is the combination of happiness and satisfaction. It is not about how much money a person gains in his/her entire life. A person does not have to earn billions of dollar to be successful: a billionaire can be rich but can carry an illness that generates pain and sadness; a successful person can donate all of his/her money to charity and be left with nothing. If the person is not happy and satisfied, he/she fails my definition of success. To me, a successful person only does whatever he/she likes or has an interest and has full passion about what he/she is doing. He/she has to be satisfied with the result without compromising his/her happiness.

5. What previous experience from your past makes you feel like you relate to AKPsi?

For me, since I have been working in Dunkin' Donuts for a year, I felt like I have a second family at Babson. The experience of people working together and learning from each other allows me to gain a lot. Each member of the Dunkin' family has their specific talent or skill even if we are only a fast food company. For instance, one of my coworkers has the ability to memorize the specific drinks for sixty percent of the customers. He knows what the customer is going to order as soon as he sees the person walking towards Dunkin'. Some of us are really fast at making food and some are good at customer service. We always exchange our opinion and teach others to improve the process and make it more efficient. We work as a family that when something happens to a team member, we cover his/her shift or comfort that person. We also hang out outside of work.

AKPsi gives me the same feeling when I first met two of the brothers, Jenny Son and Kevin Jiang. I see myself in Jenny when she always talks about the new friends she made in AKPsi, how much fun she had with the brothers when they hangout, and how the brothers help her through her homework. We both dislike people who are not genuine so when I saw her fall in love with the AKPsi family, I knew that this was the place I want to be in. Those relationships are real and forever, and they go beyond merely doing business or gain connections. Each individual in AKPsi has their own skills and is willing to help and improve each other. Furthermore, when I see that Kevin, who is a co-worker at Dunkin' Donuts, fits perfectly in AKPsi, I began to wonder where can I find my third family at Babson. He comes into work every day and describes his day spent with his brothers. He also shows me that it is possible to find a group of people with the same interests, when he added me into his Jiu Jitsu club. The interactions with them tell me that AKPsi is more than just a business fraternity and this relates me to my experience in Dunkin' Donuts.
