3. How will you contribute to the fraternity? (max 300 words)

I think I'd be able to contribute to the fraternity through my personality. I'm truly looking for a family on campus, AKPsi is where I hope to find that family. I will put in my best effort to be there for my brothers whether that be emotionally or academically. I'm a very observant individual who is very aware of their surroundings. As a result, I know when someone is off and know how to support them in whatever way that they need. In addition, I hope to be another enthusiastic addition to the fraternity through my outlook on life. I have participated in various leadership seminars and programs and hope to contribute that to AKPsi, I want to be able to take these experiences I have had and continue to help AKPsi grow in the direction that it's members want it to. Because at the end of the day it's about every brother's experience, not just my own.

4. How do you measure success? (max 300 words)

I measure success by the amount of people you were able to help along the way. Anyone can have material success, the means of getting there vary from person to person. However, if you were able to bring other people along in your journey to the top whether that means mentoring them, supporting them, or bringing them along with you, that is a measurable point of success. The impact may be different for each individual but having the ability to say you helped others along the way is meaningful to me. Making these meaningful connections between these individuals is invaluable to who I am, because I care very deeply about those around me.

5. What previous experience from your past makes you feel like you relate to AKPsi?

In my view AKPsi is a brotherhood and a family that comes together to help each other grow professionally. In high school I had this family feeling through the friends and connections that I had made on campus. We were all quirky, loving, and easy-going individuals who understood when to be serious about what we were doing whether that be school work, extracurricular or other projects. This is the feeling that I get from the brothers that I have interacted with. Everyone is extremely open to the idea of getting to know one another, not because they want to grow professionally or have something to gain from the relationship, but because they truly believe in the family aspect that AKPsi brings. I hope that by joining AKPsi I can become a part of this family, and in turn I hope AkPsi finds value in having me become a brother.
