3. How will you contribute to the fraternity? (max 300 words)

I believe that I can contribute a great amount to the brotherhood. I come naturally with a big smile and a very positive attitude. I always walk around with a smile and am constantly asked why I can't stop smiling. I can bring people up when they're down, but also make a brother's day even better. Although I am a very upbeat person, I also have a very determined mindset and a can-do attitude. When tasks are given to me, I can get them done well in a timely matter. I am a true problem solver and am not afraid to tackle any issue. I will be a brother who is willing to continually sacrifice and work for the benefit of all. I love to help people out and helping a brother would be a no-brainer. I am a person who is very truthful and real with what I say and will stay loyal to the brotherhood. I am rushing AKPsi because, from what I have learned about the brotherhood through many conversations, I know that AKPsi will provide me enough value to stay a devoted member! Because I believe that creating and providing value is very important, I will strive to be a valuable member who works to create value for not only each brother, but also for all the stakeholders of the fraternity. I think I would be a very dynamic member of the fraternity and someone who isn't afraid to get their hands dirty.

4. How do you measure success? (max 300 words)

I measure success based on the match between an expected outcome and the actual outcome. When I set an expectation, it's an expectation for myself. I don't set expectations where I compare myself to others. To explain further, I will use the example of playing in a golf tournament. Usually, most people would think they are successful if they win the golf tournament, but I tend to disagree. Success to me is when my anticipated score meets my actual score. When I go out to the golf course I set a goal for myself depending on the current state of my game and the difficulty of the course. If the score I produce matches my expectation, I feel that I am successful. My place on the leaderboard does not define success. If I place highly, it may bring satisfaction, but success and satisfaction do not always come and go together. I believe that success becomes skewed when one bases success off of other people. Success can turn into a very dangerous motivator very quickly and should, therefore, be kept internal.

5. What previous experience from your past makes you feel like you relate to AKPsi?

The experience that I had on my high school golf team makes me feel like I can relate to AKPsi. When I think of AKPsi I think of a group of people who are not only great friends, but also people who constantly learn from and teach each other. My high school golf team had a very similar dynamic. Each one of us on the team was great friends and always enjoyed each other's company on and off the field. Our team had many members from all grades and therefore had a wide array of skill level. One of the most beneficial things about being on the team was being able to learn from teammates who were more highly skilled than I was and to be able to teach other team members who were not as skilled. One of my teammates and friends who constantly pushed me to be my best is now ranked as one of the top five amateur golfers in the world and other teammates are still playing and improving their game. I feel that I can best relate to AKPsi through my high school golf team as they resemble each other very well.
