1. Have you previously rushed Alpha Kappa Psi? (Yes/No)

No.

2. What other organizations/extracurriculars are you a part of?

member in CSSA, BAPSA, BIAA, BIBA, MMA

3. How will you contribute to the fraternity? (max 300 words)

First, I would be everyone's brother in the fraternity. I am a person with love and humor all the time, therefore, I would make sure to bring those positive mood to the whole AKPSI family. Other than what I wrote above (which every PNM can do), I also have something unique about myself. Photography is my passion for the past five years, and being a photographer is not just being a person who can shoot professional business photos for brothers. The ultimate mission of being a photographer is to capture the best moments and share the love coming along the picture with others. Other than photography, I am also in favor of sports. Tennis and golf are two of my favorite sports, and I am fairly good at both. There must be many brothers who also enjoy playing sports, and I could be the best company.

Since AKPSI is a professional business fraternity, I've also got many professional skills to contribute to the brotherhood. I'm never scared of public speaking and giving speeches. At the same time, I am an international student from China. Being fearless and global makes myself easy to adapt to any business environment with any type of business people. Being international also brings a huge variety of professional connections.

There are much more that I can contribute to AKPSI, and shall we find out when we become brothers?

4. How do you measure success? (max 300 words)

There are two ways for me to measure success. One is very straightforward and common: MONEY. There is no way that I can live without money; it is my necessity in today's world. This is also one of the reasons why I came to Babson: to prepare myself to make more money in the future. Since money is the reality, a person with lots of money should be considered as a successful person. I would consider myself successful by the time my private garage is parked full of my dream and customized cars (I am a huge car fan). This is my realistic answer to the question.

There is another type of success that I am also looking forward to: love and peace. Those two words sound very unrealistic as a measurement of success. However, not many successful people can achieve this state of love and peace. There is no money involved in this type of scenario. Money is not the factor anymore since what I am looking for is a psychological state. There is no need to purchase luxurious cars to show how successful I am because I could be surrounded by people loving me, living in a peaceful world without any threats or conflicts. It is a far but hopefully accomplishable period of time for me in the future.

5. What previous experience from your past makes you feel like you relate to AKPsi?

I was a leader in the leadership class in my high school. Though it was not a brotherhood, the leadership class has mentors and mentees. I was one of the leadership mentors and I had five mentees myself. There were many fun games that I played with all my mentees as well as with other mentor's groups. I felt like living in a community during that period of time, and my mentees and I are just like brothers and sisters. When I start to rush for AKPsi, the whole process make me feel like flashing back to high school and standing in one of my mentee's shoes. Rushing for a fraternity is something that I never experienced before, and I value this two weeks a lot as it helped me much on socializing and most importantly, to be myself.
